Q: Show there is no rational torsion in a finite-dimensional  $k$ -vector space  $V$  I'm studying for my final and am stuck on this problem. I am asked to show that the statement "there is no rational torsion in a finite-dimensional  $k$ -vector space  $V$ " is true by proving that the only elements in  $V$  whose order is a power of  $p$  for some prime  $p$  are zero. Now, to begin, I believe that the following is true:  $\forall a \in V, a^n = 0 \iff a = 0$  If this is true, it's pretty much done since every element of  $V$  has an inverse. Otherwise, I was told that my proof is incorrect, and that the argument is actually the contrapositive, i.e. assuming the existence of a non-zero element  $v$  such that  $v^n = 0$  for some natural number  $n$ , the problem is essentially solved. I haven't been able to find any counter-examples to this statement. I can't use the fact that every element in  $V$  has an inverse and that implies that  $V$  is a field. How do I solve this? A: There are many counter-examples:  $p$ -adic spaces are good examples: If  $k = \mathbb{Q}_p$  and  $V$  is a non-zero  $\mathbb{Q}_p$ -vector space then  $V = \mathbb{Q}_p$  since any non-zero element  $v$  of  $V$  satisfies the conditions for being a torsion element. But the space  $\mathbb{Q}_p \times \mathbb{Q}_p$  is a non-trivial vector space.
