IntelliLock. Forgot Password?Â .Q: how to replace characters in shell script I have a java program in which I am using a String as input (eg.: 'A B C D E') where each 'A','B','C','D','E' is a line ( delimited). I need to print a shell script file out using the above String data. I am using the the following code to do it: `echo $STRING | while read char do s="`echo $char | tr "\ " "`" echo $s done` But it keeps repeating 'E' for all the lines in the file. Also I don't want to replace the in the String. Could you suggest a better/ better performing way to do the above operation? A: `echo $STRING | while read char; do s="`echo $char | tr "\ " " "`" echo $s; done` Of course, you could probably just say `echo $STRING | while read char; do echo `echo $char | tr "\ " " "`; done` But it's an XY problem. The point of using a java program to generate a shell script is to use java to generate data, not to generate shell scripts. For a closer, but still not exact answer, you could say: `#!/bin/sh i=1 while read char; do s="`echo $char | tr "\ " " "`" echo "$i", "$s" ((i++)) done` At the time of writing, the 1.7.9 release of ReasonML.org is ready for testing.
