The present invention relates to a method for preparing a magnetic recording medium and more particularly to a method for preparing a magnetic recording medium by reducing a crystallization degree of a coated layer of a substrate of the recording medium by a heat treatment and adjusting the coercive force of the substrate to the coercive force of the coated layer of the recording medium after a multi-layer coating step. The present invention particularly relates to a method for preparing a magnetic recording medium by removing a curvature and strain of the surface of the coated layer of a substrate of the recording medium. In recent years, a recording density of a magnetic disk represented by a hard disk drive (HDD) becomes higher and higher due to an increase in the recording density of a recording medium and an increase in the capacity of the magnetic disk. Further, due to a recent technique for higher density recording, a substrate of a magnetic recording medium is required to have a higher flatness and a smooth surface having a small degree of surface roughness. In view of such requirement, a vapor deposition (plasma spray) method has been considered as a method for forming a multi-layer-coated thin film on the surface of a substrate. As a result of diligent studies by the inventors of the present invention, the inventors of the present invention have found that a magnetic recording medium having a sufficiently high coercive force can be obtained by a heat treatment after a multi-layer-coating step such as a vapor deposition step, a sputtering step and a plating step. The inventors of the present invention further found that the surface roughness and degree of surface roughness of a substrate having a multi-layer coating are largely affected by the heat treatment and the substrate having a multi-layer coating can be smoothed and flattened by the heat treatment. Based on such finding, the inventors of the present invention has perfected the present invention. Namely, the present invention relates to the method for preparing a magnetic recording medium comprising: a step of making a coating liquid comprising a magnetic layer material and at least a non-magnetic powder dispersed in a binder,
